Lobster Season is Almost Here: Essential Tips and Techniques for Catching California Spiny Lobster

As fall approaches, excitement builds for one of the most anticipated times of year along the California coast: the opening of lobster season. Starting at 6 p.m. on the Friday preceding the first Wednesday in October and lasting until the first Wednesday after March 15, recreational anglers can head out to the waters in search of the prized California spiny lobster (Panulirus interruptus). Whether you're a seasoned lobster seeker or a newcomer, preparing properly and understanding the regulations and techniques will set you up for a successful season.

The California spiny lobster is a favorite among recreational and commercial fishermen alike, known for its sweet, tender meat and abundance along the coast. Unlike its cousin, the Maine lobster, the spiny lobster lacks claws, which means the meat is primarily found in the tail.

SB 1066: A Game-Changer for Marine Safety and Environmental Protection

California's boating community will see purposeful change with the imminent passage of Senate Bill 1066, a bill designed to address the environmental, safety, and logistical challenges associated with pyrotechnic marine flare disposal. This legislation, which has garnered near-unanimous support in both legislative houses, is now awaiting Governor Gavin Newsom's signature. SB 1066 promises to bring reform to the end-of-life management of hazardous marine flares, setting a new standard for environmental responsibility in the marine industry.

Fast Facts: Understanding the Lifespan of Your Life Jacket – What to Do After Accidental Inflation or Exposure to Water

Life jackets are an essential safety item on any boat, designed to save lives in emergencies. However, what happens if your life jacket accidentally inflates or gets soaked? The good news is that in most cases, you don't have to replace the entire jacket. With proper inspection and maintenance, your life jacket can continue to serve you well.

Step One: Inspect seams for damage

The first thing to do after your life jacket has inflated or gotten wet is to inspect it carefully. Begin by checking the seams of the jacket. These are critical areas where damage is most likely to occur. Look for any signs of wear and tear, such as fraying, loose threads or small tears. If the seams are intact and show no signs of damage, your jacket is likely still in good condition.
